REVENUES.

How Uncle Sam Swells His Enor mous Income Taking Care of Small Things.

Conscience Money, Bequests and Post-office Keys all Help to Swell the Pile.

EVERY LITTLE HELPS.

Uncle Sam has some odd sources of revenue which rarely, if ever, attracts the attention of his more or less dutiful nephews and nieces. A careful record is kept of them, however, by the excellent corps of accountants in the office of the Treasury, and eventually the items small and large, appear duly set forth in the voluminous annual report on the finances of the government issued by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Few persons would feel inclined to look to a government report of some fifteen hundred pages for interesting reading. The mere suggestion of it conjures errors—thoughts of innumerable columns of figures, pages of statistics.

Properly considered, however, the contents of the huge volume are anything but prosaic. The work devoted to it is vast, and from it one can trace the re- day. sults of every financial operation of the government during the fiscal year. One end of the thread of every transaction leads to the Treasury Department, no matter where the other originates: and these other ends may be found at the uttermost ends of the earth, in the drawing of drafts by navy paymasters to pay for fresh water in Friendly Islands, in the payment of the stipend to the scrub woman, who cleans the floor of New York Custom House.

FROM MISCELLANROUS SOURCES.

Probably as interesting a feature, however, as any in the report is the record of government receipts from miscellaneous sources. These are of great variety and run all the way from bequests of patriotic citizens who leave money to be devoted to the payment of the national debt to the payment of private soldiers on account of hand books lost or stolen.

The total receipts from miscellaneous sources, according to the recently issued report of the Secretary of the Treasury for 1893, were $3,651,328 82. Three large items alone appear. These are fees on letters patent, $1,265,513 55; tax on circulation of national banks, $1,392,623 63, and the sale of the old Custom House site at Pittaburg, Pa., $433,500; making a total of $3,121,447 18, and leaving a balance of $529,881 64, which is accounted for by forty-five separate and distinct entries. It is smong these minor items that the interest in the miscellaneous sources of the revenue lies.

The conscience fund, for example, is source which always attracts attention. During the fiscal year of 1893 the government received from persons feeling the prick of conscience $1,798 76. The annual receipts from this source are never very large, which fact affords a sad commentary upon the honesty of people, for the government is swindled right and left by travellers returning from abroad.

Assessments upon owners of vessels for deaths on shipboard enriched the government during the same period by $970. This is equivalent to a statement that ninety-seven persons died of natural causes on American ships, during the year. At first thought it seems peculiar that Uncle Sam should demand $10 a piece for every citizen who dies at sea, but the provision is a wise one, as it has migrant ships to secure the services of better doctors than formerly, and owners and sailing masters to pro-vide adequate medicine chests for long

The smallest amount of revenue from any miscellaneous source by the government during 1803 was $1. This finds entry with the other items, and was de-rived from the rent of property acquired under the internal revenue laws in some place not mentioned. The next lowest amount is $1.01, and is set down as "interest on $33 90, part of United States Pacific bond held in Indian Trust Fund," From work done for private individuals in public shops the Republic was further enriched by $4 50, while through un-explained balance in disbursing accounts it profited to the extent of $5 21.

From private soldiers of the United States who lost their hand books and were compelled to make the loss good the government derived $4 70, while through forfeiture in consequence of lost post office letter box keys $63 50 was added to the revenue. This last source of revenue is explained as follows:-"If one hires a letter box he is compelled to deposit a dollar for his key. If this is not returned when the box is given up the amount is forfeited to the government." In the "miscellaneous source" schedule the country figures as a creditor of one collapsed bank, the Exchange National of Norfolk, Va, on account of public money deposited for the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. A dividend was paid last year, and from this source the government derived $506-56. The receipts from the Yellowstone National Park increased the revenue by $1,348. A sale of buildings on the abandoned military reservation at Fort Bridger, Wyo., brought in $1,222, and a similar sale at Fort Steele, also abandoned, $127.10.-N. Y. Herald.

A High Rating.

Last week a high-up revenue official was in the city and inspected Collector Powers' office in all departments. He made his report to headquarters and the department notified the Collector to-day that his office is now rated at 1}. This is one half above perfect, and a compliment in the highest sense to Collector Powers and his very capable office force of seven.-Owensboro Inquirer.

TWO GENERALS.

An After-the War Story of two Hard Fighters-now They Broke

Gen. Joe Shelby, who has been here for ten days, called on Gen. Schofield at army headquarters yesterday. Shelby commanded a cavalry brigade in Price's Army during the raid in Missouri, and often came in unpleasant contact with the troops commanded by Gen, Schoffeld. On the occasion Shelby swooped down on Schofield like a western blizzard and carried off his colored cook. When they met yesterday Shelby asked his old time adversary if he remembered the loss of his cook.

"Yes," said Gen. Schofield. "He was the best cook I ever had in the field, and I was greatly vexed over his loss."

"He died a few years ago in St. Louis," said Shelby, "and he had the biggest funeral you ever saw, white or black. I thought I had struck you in a tender spot when I nabbed your cook," he added with a laugh. "Yes," said the commander-in-chief, musingly. "He was a great cook; but, General, if you will remember, I got even with you for that act the next day.' "Well, you rather did make things even," remarked the Missourian. "Did he punish you much?" asked friend addressing Shelby.

"Did he? Great Scott! He wiped the earth up with me," exclaimed Shelby in | taking. a candid enthusiasm at the recollection of his own defeat.-Washington Post.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing to afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J.
